Hanna-Barbera THE FLINTSTONES

THE MODERN ICE AGE

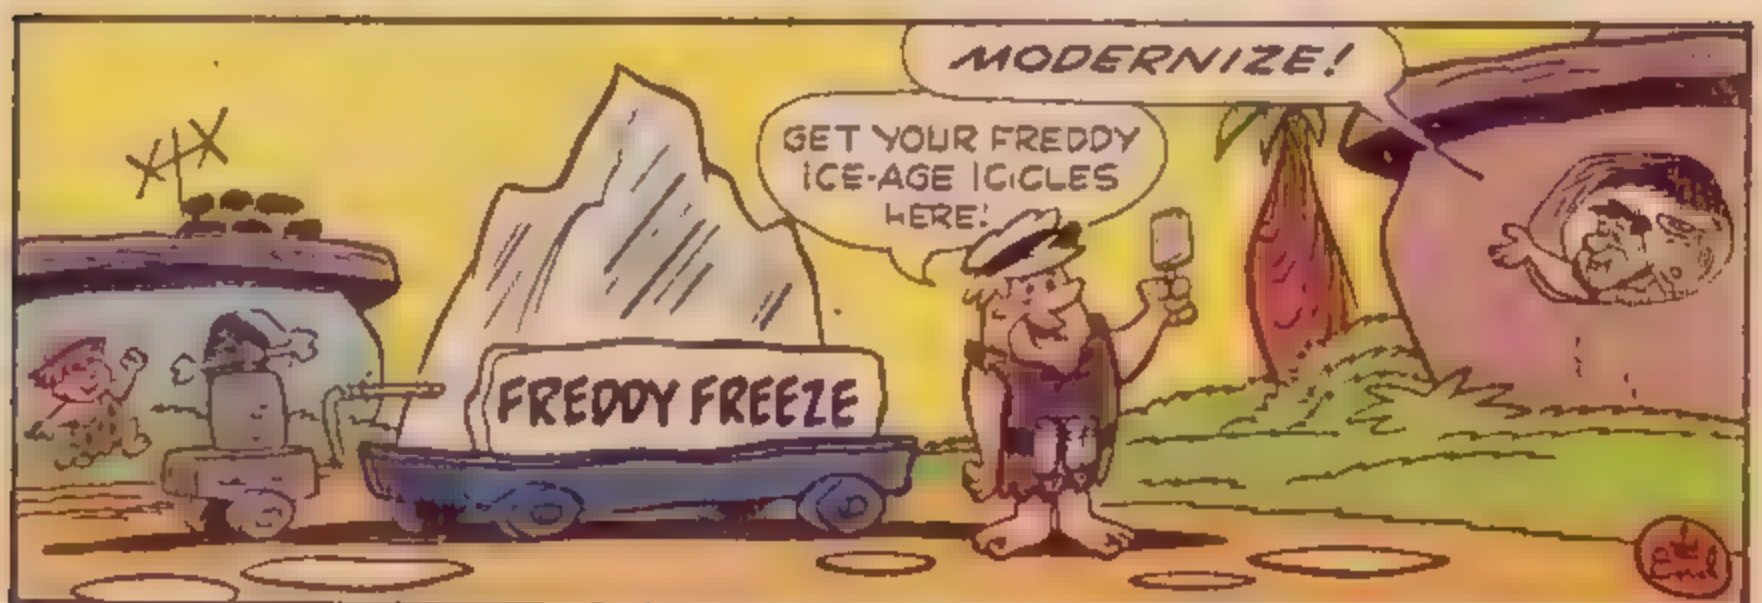

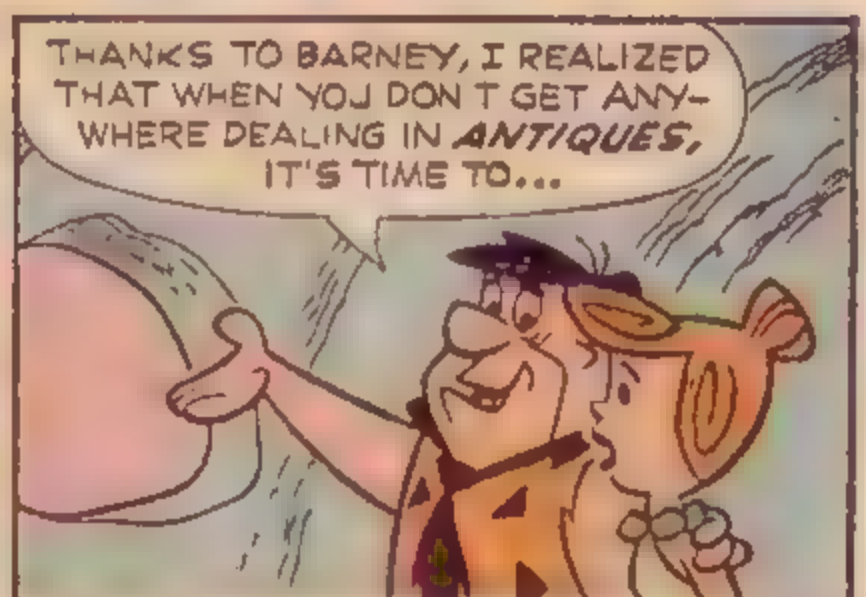

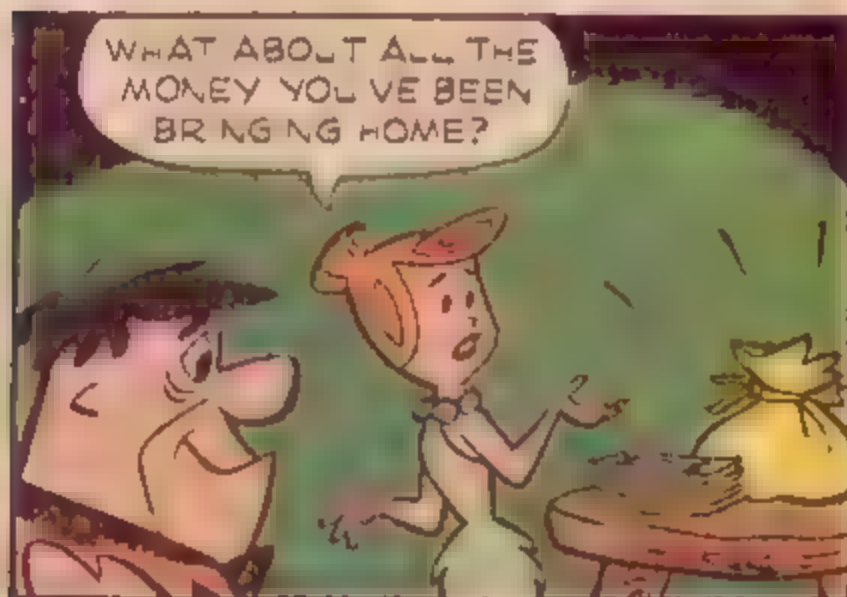

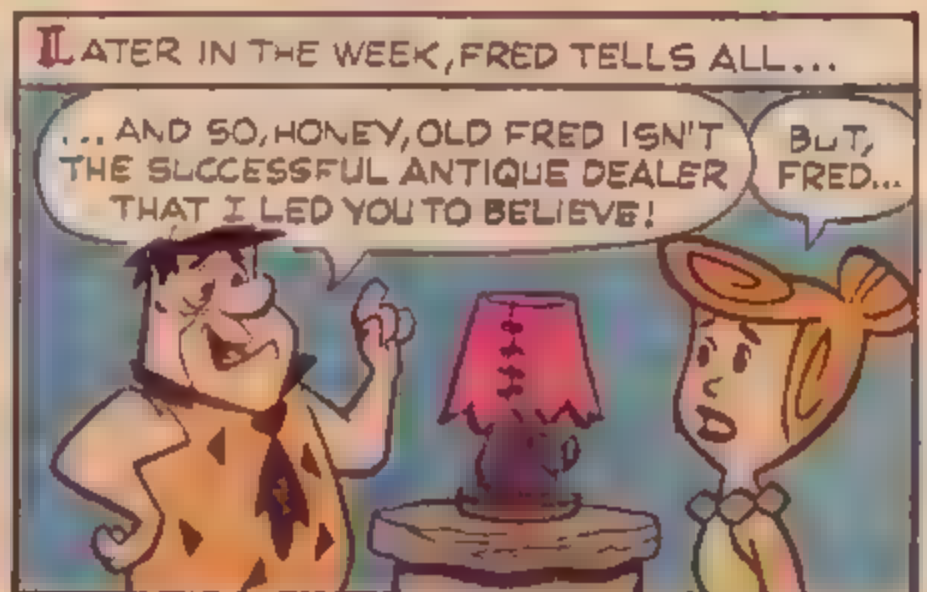

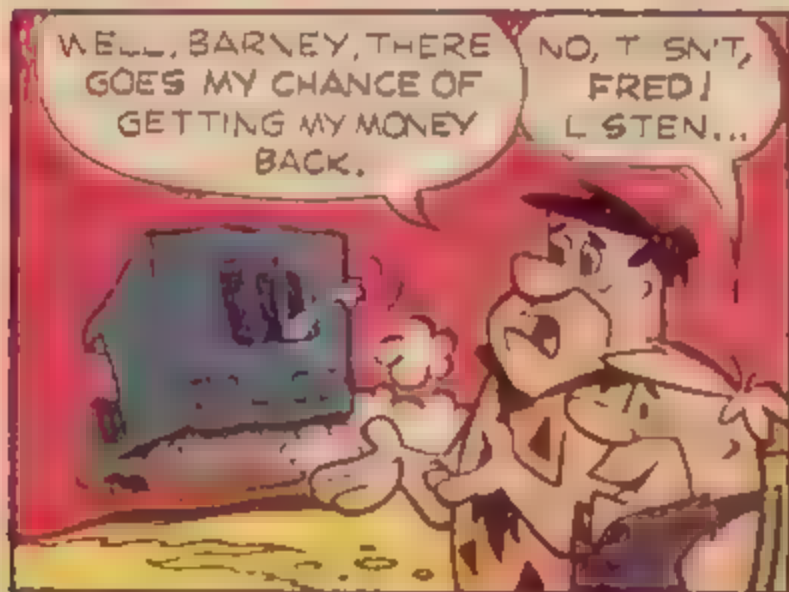

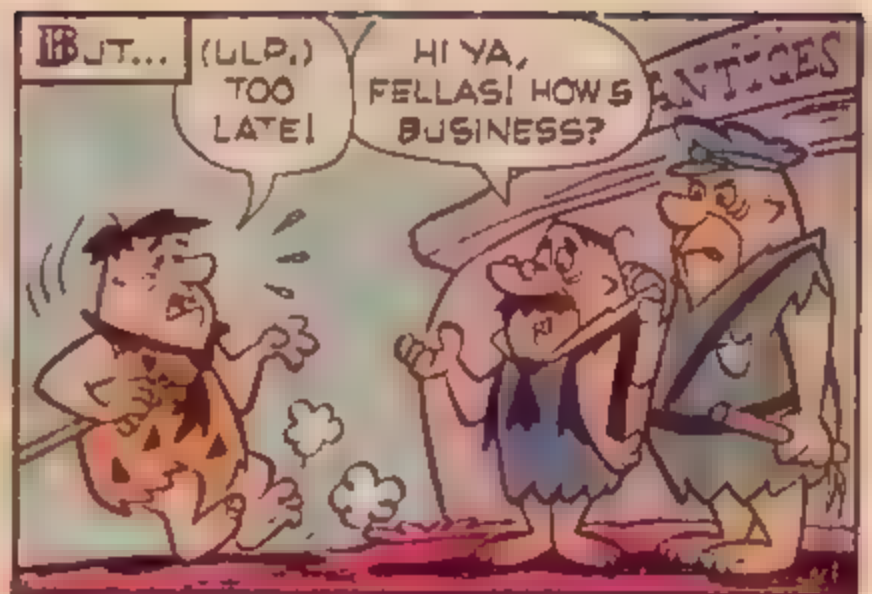

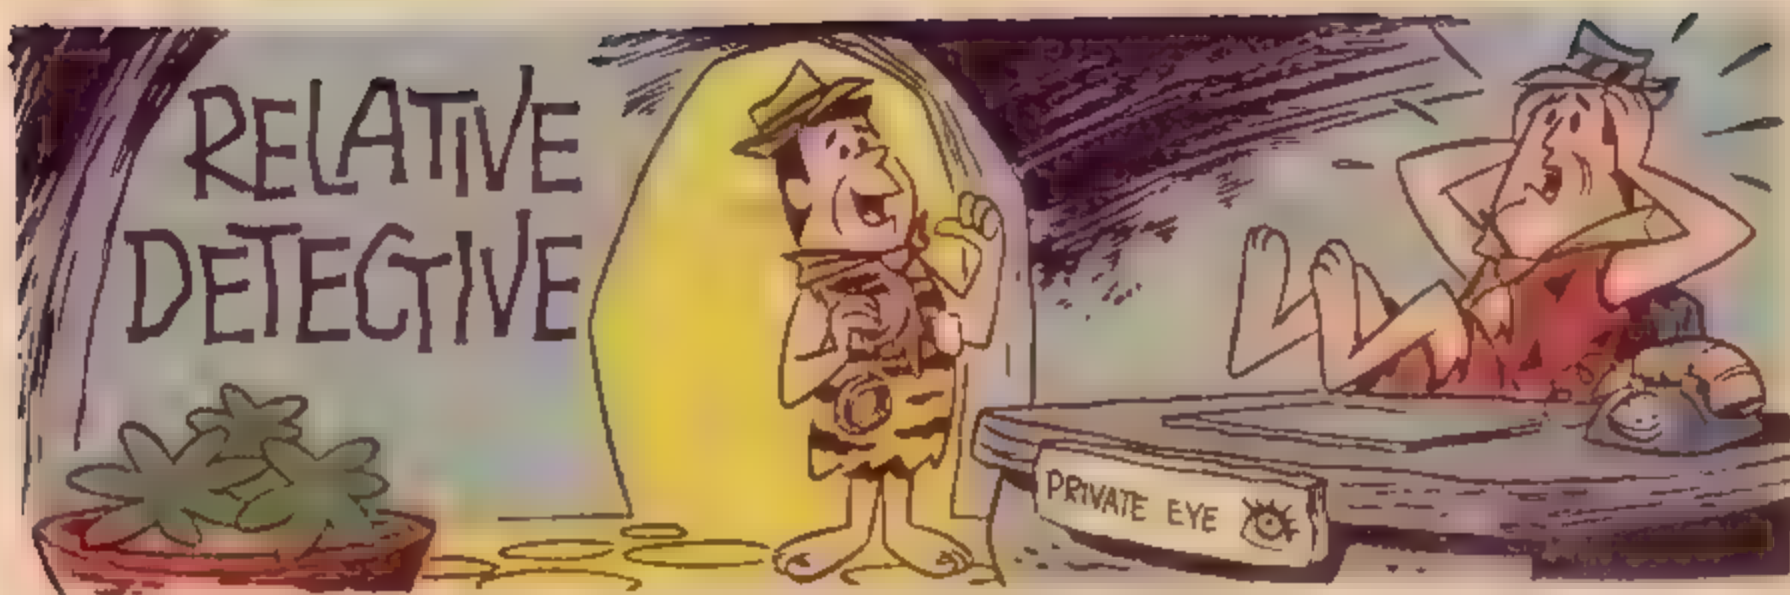

Perry Gunnite sat at his desk with his feet propped up, looking every bit like the tough private eye he was. But, suddenly, when a certain man walked through the door, Perry's private eyes bulged out. He began to sweat and shiver. His blood ran cold.

"No! Go away! Please go away," yelled Perry in horror.

"Awww, please let me stick around, Uncle Perry. You know how bad I want to be a private detective like you," moaned Perry's nephew, Gunther Gunnite.

"That's just the kind of detective you are . . . bad! The last three times you've been in here pestering me to be a detective, it's been nothing but trouble," replied Perry.

"But this time I'm well equipped, Unc," Gunther pressed on. "Look, I've got a badge and even some new handcuffs. See?"

Stepping closer, Gunther snapped the shiny handcuffs on Uncle Perry.

"Okay, okay . . . they're nice. Now take them off," ordered Perry Gunnite.

"Ulp! There's one thing I'm not equipped with . . . a key," Gunther confessed.

"Grrr! I'll have to go down to the corner and have these sawed off," fumed Perry.

"I'll go with you, Unc," volunteered Gunther, eagerly.

"No, you won't. You'll stay right here out of my way until I get back," answered Perry as he went out the door, handcuffed.

A few minutes later, Perry walked back into the office after having the cuffs sawed off. He was quite shocked to see a girl tied up and gagged in a chair. Gunther was standing proudly beside her.

"She's probably some kind of spy! I caught her sneaking into your office and going through the files," proclaimed Gunther.

"You dimwit! She's supposed to go through my files. She's my secretary!" yelled Perry.

"Not any more, I'm not," cried the frightened girl, as Perry removed the gag.

After she stormed out, Perry turned to his nephew angrily and bawled him out.

"Of all the stupid tricks. You couldn't be a private eye in a million years," yelled Perry. "Now go away and leave me alone."

Gunther went sadly out the door.

A few minutes later, Perry's conscience began to bother him. He thought perhaps he had hurt his nephew's feelings, so he made a rash decision.

"I better go find the young squirt and apologize," decided Perry.

Half an hour later, Perry was speeding around in his car. He was very worried. He had been looking for his nephew all that time and hadn't found him. Perry sped toward the edge of town, thinking maybe Gunther had decided to run away from home.

Suddenly a siren sounded behind him and a traffic patrolman pulled him over.

"You better have a good excuse for going that speed," the policeman told Perry.

"I have! I'm looking for a dangerous missing person . . . my nephew," replied Perry.

"I'm not missing," said Gunther, popping up from the back seat. "I was just taking a little nap. You shouldn't fib, Unc!"

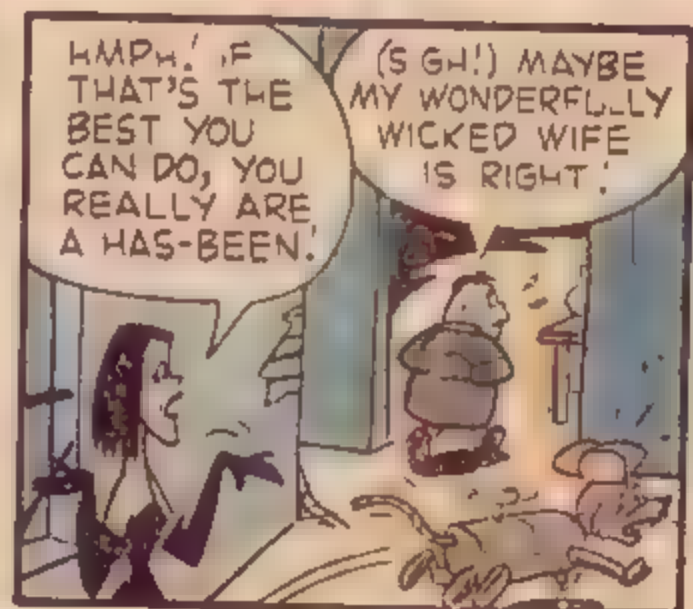

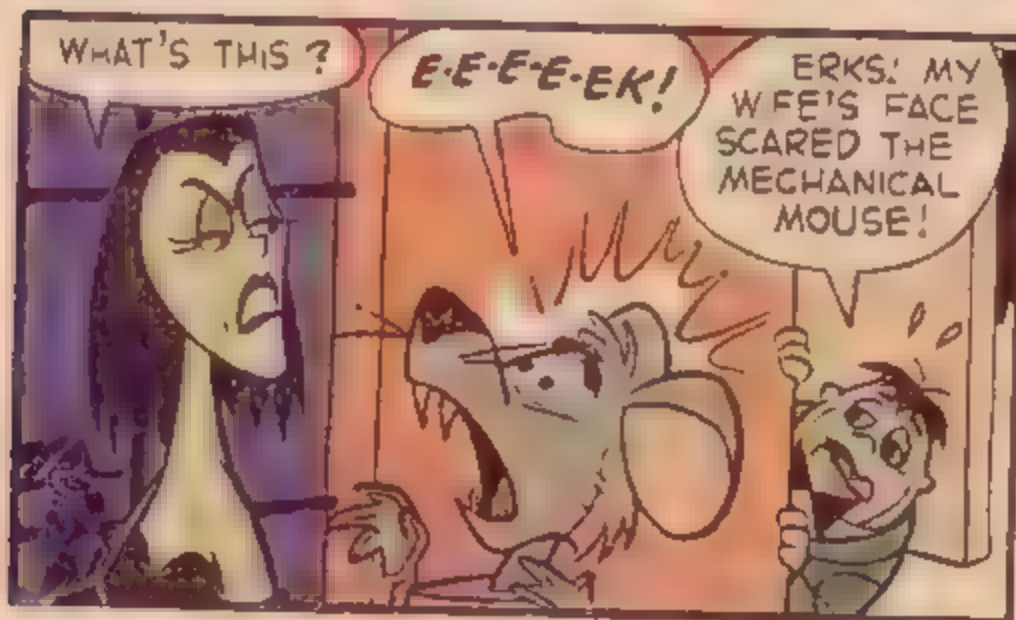

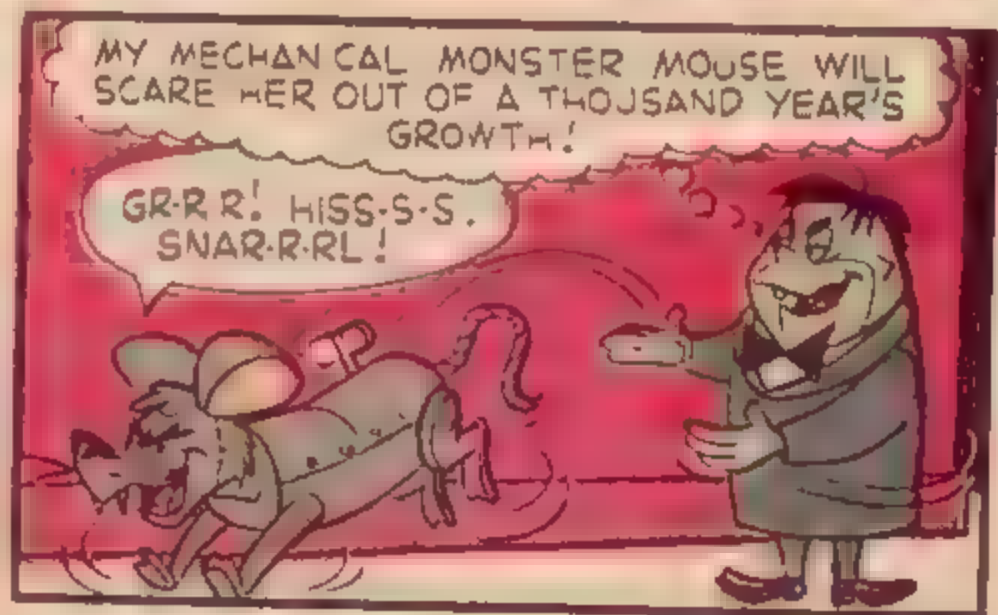

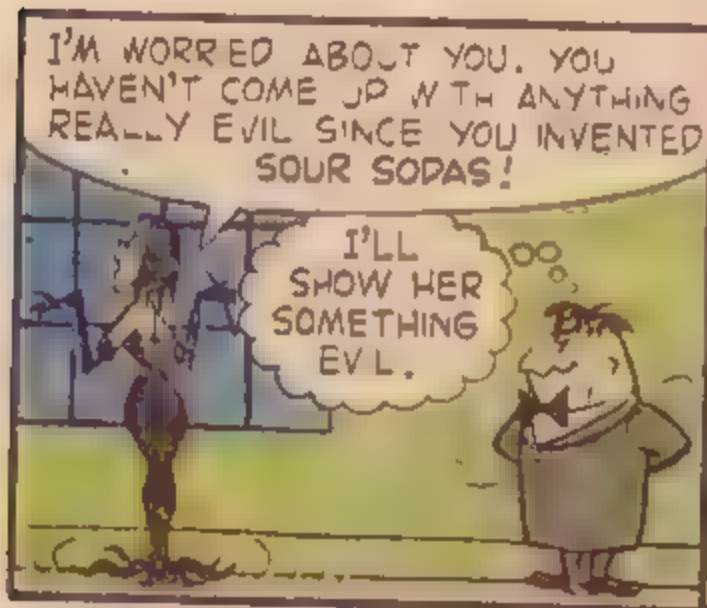

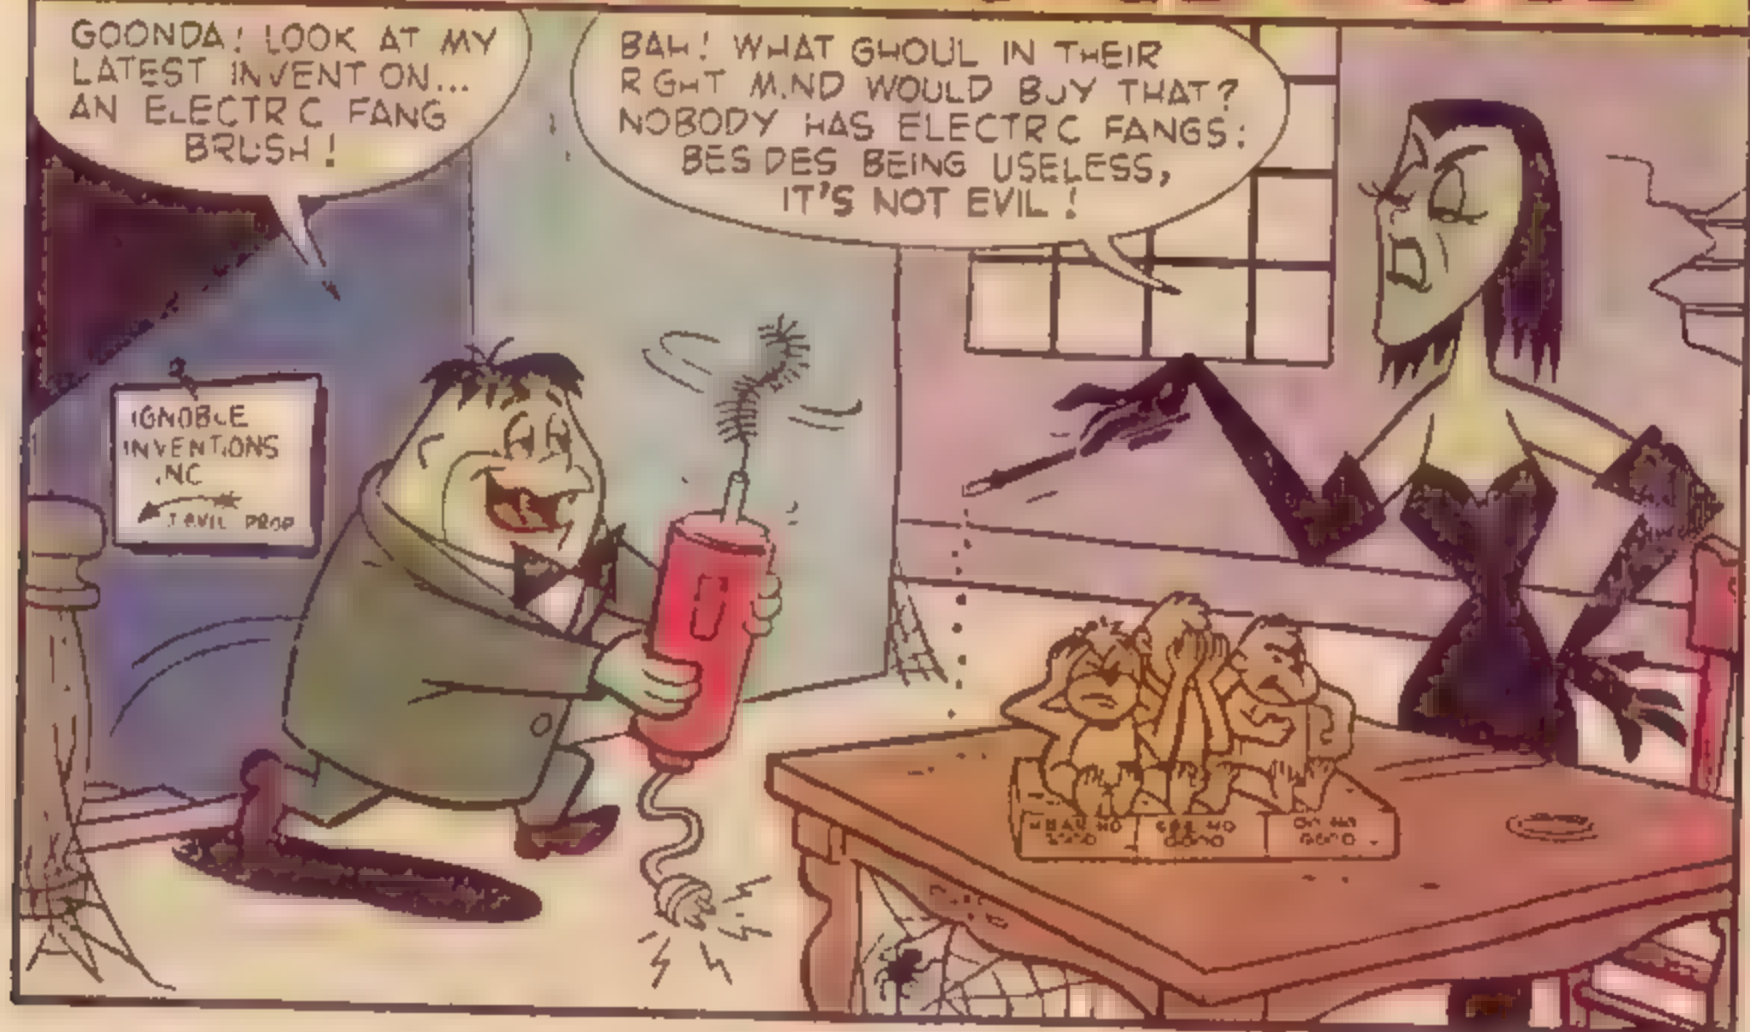

"Lying to get out of a ticket, huh?" the policeman said. "Come with me, buster."

Soon Gunther was standing beside his uncle at the police station.

"Well, you have to admit I helped bring a lawbreaker to justice at last," chirped Gunther, grinning broadly.

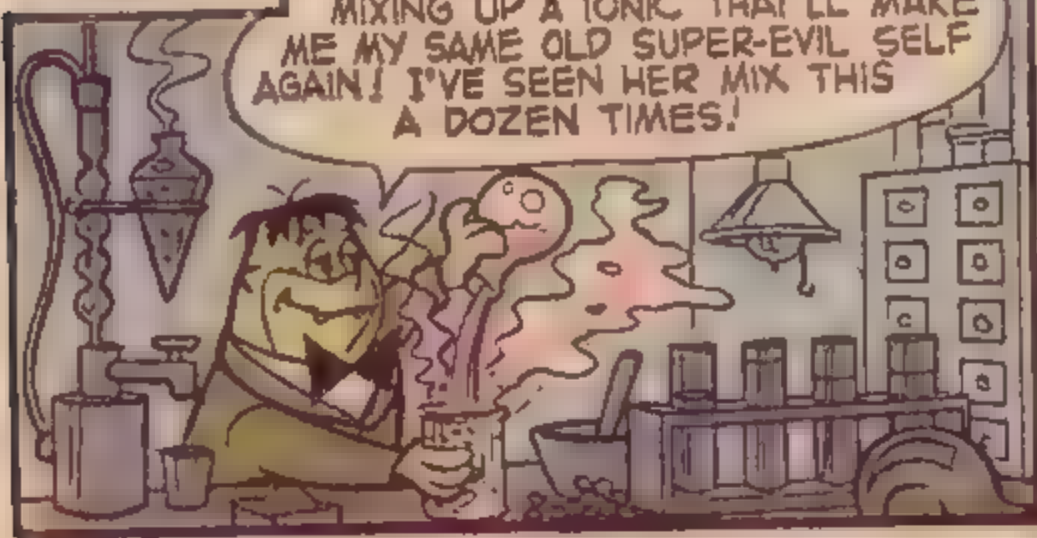

"Hmph!" snorted Perry the lawbreaker, as he angrily paid his speeding fine.
